Regional Focus - Piedmont

Piedmont is Italy's northwestern-most region, and true to its name, which translates to 'foot of the mountain', Piedmont is surrounded by mountains on three sides.

The region leads the way for high quality red wines. The two most highly regarded sub-regions from Piedmont are Barolo and Barbaresco, both made from the Nebbiolo grape. Barolo is further divided into 11 communes. The western areas are comprised of younger soils known as Tortonian and typically produce more elegant wines, while the eastern areas are older soils known as Serravallian, producing broader and more robust wines.

Below we have a selection of the region's wines, from the delicate and refreshing whites to the powerful reds and everything in between.

Regional Focus - Tuscany

Tuscany in central Italy is famous for rolling hills, Renaissance artists, Bistecca Fiorentina, and of course wine, with the most famous grape variety being Sangiovese.

While much of the region focuses on Sangiovese, the styles are vast. From Chianti's altitude-driven, complex sub-zones offering a wealth of styles from fresh and approachable to structured and oaky; Morellino di Scansano's ripe and juicy; and Montalcino's depth and power.

Bolgheri has made a massive impact in recent years with their wines known as 'Super Tuscans. These wines upset the traditional DOCG system by using Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc and Merlot, grape varieties that are more familiar in Bordeaux, steering away from the traditional wine styles made from Sangiovese.

Regional Focus - Sicily

Sicily is the largest and most populous island in the Mediterranean, and although part of Italy, it has a strong history and culture of its own. Due to its strategic position close to North Africa and Europe, the island has been ruled by countless nationalities throughout history: Greeks, Romans, Vandals and Spaniards have all had their turn.

However, there is more to this southern island than volcanos and gangsters, with wines being crafted all over from a cornucopia of grapes.

Home to Europe's largest, still active volcano, Mount Etna, Sicily is hot on the heels of the great wines of the north. Often referred to as the "Nebbiolo of the South", Sicilian native Nerello Mascalese creates wines of many styles. The eastern slopes crafting more delicate, ethereal styles, while the western slopes are broad, bold and spicy.

Nebbiolo

Piedmont's noble grape, Nebbiolo, is pale in colour but deceptively powerful. Perfumed rose petals, tar and dried cherry, backed by firm, grippy tannin and racy acidity.

It reaches its greatest heights in Barolo and Barbaresco, where age transforms youthful austerity into something silky and complex, often taking a long time to fully unfurl. Demanding but deeply rewarding.

Sangiovese

Italy's most planted red grape, Sangiovese is the backbone of Tuscany and beyond. High in acidity and savoury tannin, with a signature lift of sour cherry, dried herbs and a rustic earthiness.

Styles range enormously, from the bright, cherry-driven charm of every day Chianti to the concentrated, brooding power of Brunello di Montalcino.

Amaros

Bitter by name, beguiling by nature

Amaro, Italian for "bitter," is a category unlike any other: a spectrum of herbal liqueurs ranging from intensely bitter to lusciously sweet, delicate to full throttle. No two regions make it quite the same, which is exactly the point.

Traditionally poured after a meal to aid digestion, amaro is just as home alongside coffee, or simply savoured any time of day.

A short history

Amaro's roots trace back to ancient Rome, when herb infused wines were prized for their restorative qualities, a civilised excuse to indulge a little further.

Monks refined the tradition through the Middle Ages, swapping wine for spirit, and by the 1800s amaro had found its way from monastery cellars into Italian pharmacies, sold as a tonic for the body as much as the palate.

What began as closely guarded family and monastic recipes has since blossomed into hundreds of distinct expressions, each one a small taste of the region, and the hands, that made it.
